"Every page turned, every assignment conquered, and every exam passed brings you one step closer to a brighter future.

Remember, it's not the weight of the burden that breaks you, it's the manner in which you carry it.

Carry your dreams with pride, persistence, and grace."

There’s no such thing as a good or bad emotion—only good or bad reactions to an emotion.

Anger can be productive. Disappointment can be educational. Frustration can be transformative. Happiness can be misleading.

Focus less on the emotion itself and more on how you choose to react to it.

In what ways have you overestimated your emotions and let them dictate how you behave and how you see the world? Where has this gotten you?
